Bibliography and System of Reference

System of reference to sources in the footnotes

Nearly every footnote in this edition of The Bible in Spain needs one of more source references. In order not to lengthen the notes unnecessarily, I reduce these references to the utmost. Wherever possible, a source reference will be limited to an abbreviated formula consisting of the author's name plus the page number, put between square brackets. Only where several works of the same author have been consulted, a catchword of the title will be added between the author's name and the page number. Likewise, when necessary, the number of a volume or a chapter gets added. With these clues in hand, the inquisitive investigator may visit the bibliography below, where the books and articles are listed in alphabetical order by author's name, to trace the precise location on which a certain statement is based.

Thus the following styles of source references may be encountered in the footnotes:

[Gauthier, 495] refers to page 495 of Théophile Gauthier's Voyage en Espagne. This is the only book by Gauthier used in the footnotes.

[Widdrington, vol. 1, 55] refers to page 55 of the 1st volume of Samuel Widdrington's 2-volume Spain and the Spaniards in 1843.

For reasons of space, these references are occasionally used as grammatical subject into a running phrase. Thus the sentence means that Ian Robertson makes the statement in question on page 12 of his article 'George Borrow in Portugal', in the Proceedings of the 1991 George Borrow Conference.

'Robertson [Portugal, 12] thinks that the inn may have been in the vaulted building standing opposite the north side of the church of Sâo Francisco.'

Only in a few cases – when a source is quoted no more than once or twice - the classic source reference by author, title, place and date of publication etc. is written out in full in the customary scholarly manner. These 'complete' references do not appear in the bibliography below, as being practically redundant.

Rarer still, when a reference is made to an original, unpublished document which I found during research, the footnote will list the archive which keeps the document, plus the folder which contains it, and its registration number (if there is one).

Bibliography

[Ayguals] Ayguals de Isco, Wenceslau, Maria Hespanhola, A Victima d'um Frade, Lisboa: Romano Torres, 1890-1891, 2 volumes. This is the translation of the Spanish language Maria, hija de un jornalero, by Wenceslau Ayguals de Isco (or Izco), first published in Madrid 1845-1846.

[GBB] George Borrow Bulletin. The 'Bulletin' is the official periodical of the George Borrow Society, published in Warborough, Wallingford, which contains innumerable articles of high standard research concerning George Borrow's life, times and writings. Published twice yearly since 1991, it presently consists of a First Series, numbered 1 to 40 (which will be referred to as plain GBB 1, GBB 2, GBB 3 etc.), and a Second Series, which started in the autumn of 2010 and runs until today (to be referred to as GBB II: 1, GBB II: 2 etc). In many cases, Bulletin articles which are only cited once or twice throughout the footnotes, will simply be referred to by the author's name, the issue of the Bulletin, and the page number, without transcribing the article's often lengthy title.
